The boy's club supplements the school, and the school might well adopt its methods as far as practicable.

In the long run, i believe that such clubs as are here described, will do more toward the upbuilding of character, more toward mental and moral development, and, eventually more toward in-building. He was sitting on a huge block of marble, his feet being between that block and another on the front part of the wagon. The blocks fell topart of the wagon. The blocks fell together as the team reached the postoffice grounds, catching Mr. McCale's legs.

Both legs were badly injured but by a lucky chance neither was broken. Mr. McCale was taken home in a hack.

A hen owned by L. E. Lord, of Rutland, recently laid an egg, weighing a quarter of a pound and measuring eight inches around the long way, and six and three-quarters inches the small way. The egg shell is of the ordinary shade, but has a slightly raised band about an inch wide and a little darker in color around the middle. Held to the light, the ends show a mottled interior, with the numerous dark spots apparently on the inside of the shell. The portion inside the band is clear and of the same hue as the ordinary egg. An effort will be made to hatch the specimen.

Some novel attempts in Easter eggs have been on exhibition lately in J. F. have been on exhibition lately in J. F. Lamson's store in Randolph and fairly rival in freakishness the millinery of the season. The new style is more elongated than the old and by the hens of Fred Williams has been carried to such an extreme that one specimen less than two inches in length has the appearance of a crooked-neck squash in miniature. ton resulted Friday in the arrest of two men on charges of breach of the peace. One was George Goodwin, a night-watchman, and the other was John Smith, a fireman. The two men tell different stories in regard to the affair and the truth of the matter is to be sifted from the untruth Monday after-noon at two o'clock before Justice M. G. Leary. Smith claims that a dispute aros over wheeling shavings and that Good-win tapped him on the head with a revolver. He also tells a tale about two shots being fired. His head is injured. Goodwin claims that Smith attacked him with a dinner pail and threatened to kill him. Bail in Goodwin's case was fixed at $200, which he furnished. Smith is still in jail. The men were ar-rested by Deputy Sheriff Ravelin.
